

FALL SEMESTER 2013 FAVOURITES

Photo by Gabrielle Smith

Jean Stewart gets her hair washed and cut every week by Lori Gallant at Trenton Barber Shop. They chat like old friends, and Gallant says Jean is “her favourite client.”

A million moments captured through the eye of the lens

By Paulina Uy

There are a total of 14 courses in the second and third semesters of the Loyalist College photojournalism program.

Each course has at least seven story assignments, making a total of about 100 for the calendar year.

That means Loyalist photo students collectively captured millions of images in 2013.

It took a lot of patience to catch those moments through the lens and thousands of hours were spent edited them.

As the semester ends, we reflect on the photographs that were taken so far this year.

Photojournalism students spent every day capturing moments – from the most serious of events to poignant ones. They captured photographs from national celebratory events to everyday slices of life. These photographs range from spot and hard news to feature photos.

They came about by simply talking to people. “Good things happen when you talk to people,” says Frank O’Connor, photojournalism professor and co-ordinator at Loyalist College.

This collection of images is the proof of that.

Photo by Amanda Cheung

Nov. 17 – Shirley Metzzer, 48, gently wakes up her son Kirk, 19, in the late afternoon. Just like any other teenager, Kirk enjoys staying up late and sleeping in on the weekends. He spends much of his time in the basement watching movies on the TV or his iPad and reading books.

Photo by Amanda Paulhus

Nov. 19 – Students at Albert College got the chance to touch a great-horned owl. This opportunity was brought to them by Chris Ketola of the Ontario Specialized Species Centre located in Havelock, Ont.

Above: Nov. 9 - Two days before Remembrance Day, two children pause to look up in curiosity at the National War Memorial in Confederation Square. Canadians across the country took time to honour veterans and those who died in conflict. Photo by Michal Bond

Right Dec. 9 – Family members of Const. John Zivcic watch his casket being loaded into a hearse. He received full police honours at his memorial at the Toronto Congress Centre. Photo by Jeremy McKay

Photo by Maggie Naylor

Nov. 19 – Jeweller John O'Connor examines a necklace in his downtown business, O'Connor's Jewel Box. John has been working for 44 years at the jewelry store.

Photo by Franki Ikeman

Nov. 15 – Todd Lucas and Kelley Johnston take parts off of a scrap car at Hillcrest Auto Wreckers. Johnston has worked at the yard for 25 years and Lucas came to work there eight years ago after leaving a job in a factory. The wrecking yard is owned by Lucas' brother, Bud Lucas, and has been in the family since 1948.

Photo by Tristan Urry

Nov. 15 – Canada Alloy Castings has an annual pouring capacity of 18,000 tons. They pour mostly ferrous alloys and C958 bronze.

Photo by Emily Reeson

Nov. 16 – Justin Reeson squats 441 pounds at the Ontario Powerlifting Association Classic provincial championships in Ottawa. The powerlifter placed third.

(Above) Sept. 25 – Brooke Miller, 26, purchased downtown Belleville bridal shop, Runway Bridal in February 2012. Miller took marketing in college and wanted to make a switch from her previous marketing job at a real estate company. "I was just kind of bored with that so I decided to look around at my options and I saw that Runway was for sale." Photo by Sarah Taylor

(Right) Nov. 16 – Adam Tataryn, the head route setter at the Rock Oasis, is training newcomer Tara for the youth competition on Nov. 24. Tara has been climbing for under a year now and is already at the top of her game, climbing walls many adults would find challenging. Photo by Daniel Luk

Bottom: Nov. 17 – Imam Mohamad Jebara embraces his daughter Razaan. Jebara is the founder and teacher at Cordova Spiritual Education Centre. An avid reader, Jebara's library contains books on many different religions and is worth $100,000 he said. Many of the books are valuable antiques. Photo by Micah Bond

Photo by Guillaume Nolet

Sept. 18 – Stephen Steels has been a master captain on numerous ships for 25 years. The boat he currently operates for the 1000 Island Cruises in Kingston is the 303-ton Island Queen III. “Water has given me both great pleasure and great misery, as I have experienced both joy and death in my many years of navigation,” says Steels.

Photo by Amanda Cheung

Nov. 11 – A veteran offers his umbrella to Gus Cormier, a resident of Cobourg, during the Remembrance Day service. Despite the rain, there were still many who came out.

Photo by Andrew Lahodinskyj

Dec. 9 – PC Paul Russell, longtime friend of fallen Const. John Zivcic, follows the casket out of the Toronto Congress Centre after the memorial service. Const. Zivcic succumbed to injuries after an accident while responding to a call.

Photo by Justin Chin

Nov. 1 – People visit the Ripley’s Aquarium of Canada in Toronto, Ont. The aquarium opened its doors to visitors on Oct. 15 after a four-month delay. It features more than 16,000 marine animals living in the new 135,000-square-foot aquarium.

Nov. 24 – Small business owner Donna Kim, 35, poses for a photo in her studio on Wallace Avenue near Lansdowne Avenue in Toronto. Her business, Edge Of Your Seat, specializes in chair caning and seat weaving. She accepts custom work and also teaches classes on the craft. Kim first started learning about caning and weaving from her landlord, Peter Shoebridge, when she was 16. Photo by Emily Cumming

Photo by Hannah Yoon

Sept. 28 – Baruch Huberman studies for an exam at the Time Sculpture by Lake Ontario in Kingston, Ont. Huberman is a second-year masters of physiotherapy student at Queen’s University.

Love is in the air

Touching moments are captured by photojournalism students:

Top: Oct. 20 – Amanda Redden and Anthony Simmons enjoy the Belleville Rose Garden (Corby Park) where they share many memories together, including a proposal which lead to their engagement.

Photo by Lacy Gillott

Above: A young couple share a moment waiting for the train to arrive at Davisville subway station.

Photo by Annie Sakkab

Right: Nov. 26 – Arianna Aiello, 6, and her father Jamie, of Belleville, wait for a bus to school in Belleville. Photo by Justin Chin

Bottom: Stephen Trivieri, 19, and Alena Huberts, 19, both Queen's University students, celebrate a touchdown by Queen's in the last two minutes of game play during the first homecoming game the university has had in four years. Photo by Sarah Viissers

Above: Oct. 24 - Andy Forgie at age seven in December 1962, and at age 58 today at the Memorial Arena in downtown Belleville. Forgie, who is locally known for his children's musical entertainment and Beatles tribute band, holds close to his heart the Memorial Arena. The arena officially closed in 2010. Photo by Mandy Larade

Right: (1987-2013) Lorna Thoms, a retired nurse, re-enacts a photo from approximately 1987. Lorna has lived in the same home in Stewarttown, Ont. for 52 years. Photo by Victoria Thoms

Right - Markus Sobotka, 4, hides from his mother behind the bathroom door before he has his nightly bath. Photo by Hannah Yoon

Nov. 17 - (Bottom) Members of the Attica Senior High School Marching Band wait at Christie Pits Park in Toronto before the annual Santa Claus Parade. (L-r) Andrea Kirsh, Kristy Mell, Elizabeth Malecki, Rebecca Dominesen and Anna Schnieder, all 14-years-old, travelled to Toronto from Attica, New York to take part in the parade. Photo by Emily Cumming

Photo by Hannah Yoon

Sept. 27: The Centennial Secondary School Chargers dance to prepare for kick-off at the first game of the Friday Night Lights series in Belleville. Josh Leadbeater, centre, leads the group in their dance. The Centennial Chargers lost 10-0 to their longtime rival, the Moira Trojans. This game was important for the Chargers to win because of their history with the Trojans.

Photo by Justin Greaves

Oct. 10: William Austin of the York Lions mocks Kevin Kinahan of the Varsity Blues as he catches the ball out of bounds during a game at York University. The two teams have a long history of rivalry and physical games. The Blues won the game with a score of 56-35.

Photo by Justin Chin

Nov. 9 – Matt Brazier of the Western Mustangs holds up the Yates Cup trophy after winning the 106th OUA Yates Cup football game between the Queen’s Gaels and the Western Mustangs on Saturday, Nov. 9, 2013 at TD Stadium in London, Ont. The number one Western Mustangs claimed their 30th Yates Cup championship with a 51-22 victory over the Queen’s Gaels.

Name
Above: Oct. 13 – Yanina Vanessa Forgia of Argentina kisses a flag after crossing the finish line with an official time of 3:04:55. The marathon personal 42K took place in Buenos Aires. Photo by Emily Cumming

Left: Sept. 21 – The York Lions’ #3 Anna Easty attempts to get the ball away from Varsity Blues’ #23 Britt Siu. The game between York University and University of Toronto took place at Varsity Stadium. The game ended in disappointment for the Lions with a loss of 6-0. Photo by Emily Cumming

Bottom: Wendy Louis, 37, is a Grade 5 teacher who has been boxing for two years. When asked how boxing makes her feel, she said, “I work with kids, so boxing is a release.” Photo by Emily Cumming

Top: Nov. 19 – Jaqui Manning-Albert at her home in Cobourg in front of her collection of paintings. Manning-Albert believes women get their creative boom after the age of 50 when the children are older. That was the age when she wrote her novel Dancing On The Moon that later turned into an award-winning movie with the same name. Photo by Annie Sakkab

Right: Nov. 7 – Kathy Braun (left), laughs along with Ann Cooke, while Cooke teaches her techniques for fastening buttons onto garments. The women are part of the Qunite Needlearts Guild, made up of locals who sew, crochet and stitch, which meets at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Belleville. The guild has a sister group in Australia and the two groups routinely mail projects and correspondence back and forth. Photo by Mitch Ward

Bottom: Oct. 14 – Women shield their faces from the sun on the Wolfe Island Ferry near Kingston. Photo by Guillaume Nolet

Left: Nov. 11 – A war veteran during the moment of silence at Belleville’s cenotaph on Remembrance Day, 2013. This veteran wears five medals for military service overseas. He was at this Remembrance Day with his son and daughter-in-law. Photo by Bryan Eneas

Right: Nov. 11 – This century-old home on Fish and Game Club Road in Quinte West caught fire when coals from the wood stove got out on to the floor. The fire quickly spread from the first floor to the second-floor bedrooms and took firefighters over an hour to get the blaze under control. There were no reports of injuries. Photo by Tristan Urry

Bottom: Nov. 20 – Devon Williams (right) attends a transgender memorial with his youth group. They came together to celebrate the lives of those who passed away because of homosexual bashing. Devon is a transgender female to male and has been taking hormone medication for over five months. Photo by Sarah Robertson

Top: Oct. 11– Two young men walk along Yonge Street south of Queen Street in Toronto. Photo by Thomas Surian

Left: Nov. 10 – A woman crosses Shuter Street just steps east of Yonge Street in downtown Toronto on a chilly Sunday evening. Photo by Dillan Cools

Bottom: Artist Lily Butter Land working on her incredible nine-foot long mural in downtown Toronto as part of the Church Street Murals Project. Photo by Annie Sakkab

Photo by Dawn Barger

Vanessa Eigner decides on a DVD while her daughter Ashlie dresses her three-year-old brother. Eigner is a single mother of three that recently moved out on her own into a two-bedroom apartment in Belleville.

Photo by Guillaume Nolet

Nov. 17 – Doctors Alexandra and Kelly Schweitzer met for the first time and fell in love in the hospital elevator at Kingston General Hospital. Married last July, they are seen with their cat Maximus at their condo in Kingston.

Photo by Guillaume Nolet

Oct. 29 – For the past couple years, the Hilborns have been living off the grid on their 80-acre property, 40 kilometres west of Kingston. They hope one day to live primarily from the revenue generated from raising and selling healthier meat. This year, the Hilborns raised 12 pigs and sold out of them immediately.

Photo by Justin Chin

Oct. 31 – Mackenzie, 3, left, and Madison Drake, 6, middle, go trick-or-treating with their grandmother, Victoria in Trenton, Ont. and run into Thomas, who is dressed in a Superman costume.